BANQUETING ROOMS

THE MOST GLAMOROUS AND MEMORABLE OF OCCASIONS HAVE ALWAYS TAKEN PLACE AT THE SAVOY, AND CONTINUE TO DO SO, AND HEADS OF BUSINESS, POLITICIANS AND VIPS HAVE LONG USED THE HOTEL AS A VENUE FOR CORPORATE MEETINGS AND ENTERTAINING.

SAVOY

THE LANCASTER BALLROOM AND PARLOUR ROOMS

The Lancaster Ballroom is the largest of The Savoy's Banqueting Rooms. It has a completely clear floor space with no obscuring pillars, perfect for dancing. Uniquely for London it also has its own stage. Named after the Duchy of Lancaster, this is one of London's prime spots for grand receptions, weddings, conferences, luncheons and dances. The Lancaster Room is often used in conjunction with the adjoining Parlour Room.

Designed by René Sergéant after an 18th century Parisian salon, the Lancaster Ballroom officially opened in December 1910. Anna Pavlova danced here as part of the entertainments at a costume ball held a year or so later, and it soon became one of the most desirable venues in London.

THE RIVER ROOM

Overlooking Embankment Gardens and the Thames beyond, the River Room is a light and comfortable space combining grandeur with intimacy and warmth. It is not only perfect for private dining and special parties but also acts as a spacious and stylish reception room for large events in the Lancaster Ballroom. In 1946, the photographs of a wedding reception held in the River Room attended by the entire Royal Family showed Princess Elizabeth seen for the first time in public with her future husband Lt. Philip Mountbatten.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND MANHATTAN ROOMS

The Abraham Lincoln Room and the Manhattan Room are often used together.

The Edwardian-style Abraham Lincoln Room takes its name from a bust of the US President that was unveiled here at a birthday dinner party in 1923. The room is a fine space for business luncheons, formal dinners and dinner dances.

Close by is the Art Deco Manhattan Room which is ideal as a dedicated reception room for events in the Abraham Lincoln Room. The area is served by its own foyer and cloakrooms.

The Venetian look and feel of Gondoliers' luxurious surroundings and appointments afford an air of elegance and opulence to cocktail parties and special dining occasions. The present décor was inspired by archive photographs of original Private Dining Room interiors, taken around 1910.

MIKADO

Created around 1928, Mikado retains its original décor which is appropriately themed with Japanese prints and black-edged wooden panelled walls, a reference to the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta from which it takes its name.

IOLANTHE

Iolanthe is elegantly panelled in light oak and suitable for dining and business meetings. It was a favourite of Sir Winston Churchill who regularly lunched here with his Cabinet during World War II. So that he could have a nap after lunch, a bedroom at the hotel was kept on permanent standby for him. This was one of the original Private Dining Rooms when The Savoy opened in 1889.

PRINCESS IDA AND PATIENCE

Overlooking the Thames, this room has a double name because it was originally two separate Private Dining Rooms when the hotel opened in 1889. The wall between the rooms was removed in 1935, but otherwise the décor appears much as it would have been when the hotel first opened.

PINAFORE

This is one of the Savoy's original Private Dining Rooms. The décor, featuring wooden panelling, was designed by Basil Ionides in 1926. Views towards the Thames provide a distinguished setting. Pinafore is well known as the place where 'The Other Club' meets regularly while Parliament is in session. The club was founded by Sir Winston Churchill and Lord Birkenhead in 1910 for distinguished figures from the world of politics and the media.
